Coca-Cola Andina is awarded with the ALAS20 2016 Company distinction in Chile

Together with the maximum distinction, the Company additionally obtained first place in the category of Investor Relations and second place in the categories of Sustainability and Corporate Governance.

During a ceremony held November 28, 2016, Coca-Cola Andina was awarded with the ALAS20 2016 Company distinction, the most important category to which a company can aspire in ALAS20 nationwide in Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Mexico and Peru. Every year only one company in each country is worthy of this distinction.

The ALAS20 award is granted to those entities that demonstrate leadership, consistency, and excellence in the disclosure of public information on their investor relations, sustainable development, and corporate governance practices. The company selected in the category ALAS20 Company is determined through a systematic evaluation process, considering scoring criteria based on empirical evidence.

In addition to the ALAS20 Company distinction, Coca-Cola Andina received the following recognitions:

First place in the category: Leading Company in Investor Relations,
Second place in the category: Leader in Sustainability,
Second place in the category: Leader in Corporate Governance, and Third place in the category: Director of Leading Company in Sustainability

"We are very proud to have received these awards, which undoubtedly prove that we are on the right path. The permanent commitment with our investors, as well as the highest corporate governance standards that Coca-Cola Andina has, along with the sustainable development of our business, led towards being recognized as the ALAS20 2016 Company in Chile. We are convinced that the efforts of all our collaborators have positioned us as a benchmark in each one of these important pillars and we will keep on working to continue generating shared value," said Miguel Ángel Peirano, Chief Executive Officer of Coca-Cola Andina.

ALAS20 is a GovernArt initiative that seeks to drive sustainable development in Latin America based on business management and investment decisions, as an effective way of achieving a more sustainable, equitable and inclusive world. Excellence in the disclosure of public information on sustainable development, corporate governance and responsible investment practices are comprehensively assessed, qualified and recognized through an annual process of companies and investors in Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Mexico and Peru.

GovernArt is a think tank and a relations consultant company with a deep knowledge of the agenda on corporate relations with stakeholders, including the use of international methodologies and new trends.
